Administration and Enforcement

note bay meridian records payment mechanics, interest accrual, maturity, conversion events, default remedies, transfer restrictions, amendment thresholds, and formal notice addresses.

Accrued principal and conversion consideration are determined at the applicable event date; an internal summary does not modify the signed instrument.

Waiver of one default or covenant does not waive a later breach, and permitted assignments remain subject to written assumption of the instrument obligations.

1. Issuance, Consideration and the Circumstances of This Note

This Convertible Promissory Note is issued by Helioscope Robotics, Inc., a Delaware corporation, to Bay Meridian Seed Fund II, L.P. as the lender that led the Company's seed financing. The Note was issued for cash advanced to the Company in a single advance, in the principal sum recorded on the signature page, at a time when the Company had begun but had not completed the process that led to its Series A financing.

The Holder advanced the money on the understanding, recorded in the recitals to this Note, that the advance would be repaid out of the proceeds of the next priced financing or would convert into the securities sold in that financing, and that the Company would not incur indebtedness ranking ahead of the Note without the Holder's consent except under the revolving facility described in Section 10.

This Note is the entire agreement of the parties as to the debt it evidences, and it supersedes the summary of terms exchanged before it was signed. A term recorded in that summary and not carried into this Note has no effect. The Note has been amended once, by the instrument described in Section 5, and has not otherwise been amended, supplemented or restated.

2. Defined Terms Used in This Note

In this Note, Maturity Date means the date so described on the signature page as extended by any amendment; Qualified Financing means the Company's next sale of preferred stock for cash in an aggregate amount at or above the threshold stated on the signature page; Change of Control has the meaning given in Section 7; and Conversion Price means the price determined under Section 6 or Section 8, as the case may be.

Interest Accrual Basis means the day-count convention stated on the signature page, and every calculation of interest under this Note is made on that basis and on no other, whether or not another basis would produce a figure the parties consider more convenient. Business Day means a day on which commercial banks are open for general business in San Francisco, California.

References to Sections are to Sections of this Note. The headings are for convenience and do not affect construction. Where this Note refers to a value stated on the signature page or in a particular schedule, that statement governs, and no summary of this Note prepared by the Company or by the Holder for any internal purpose displaces it.

3. Interest and the Accrual Convention

Interest accrues on the outstanding principal sum from the date of issuance stated on the signature page until the principal is repaid or converted. Interest accrues at the rate stated on the signature page, is computed on the Interest Accrual Basis, is simple rather than compounded, and is not capitalised into principal at any point before the event that discharges the Note.

No interest is payable in cash before the Maturity Date. Accrued interest is carried as an obligation of the Company and is discharged only on repayment or on conversion, in each case as part of the amount to which this Note is entitled at the event. The Company shall not treat accrued interest as forgiven, waived or extinguished by the passage of a payment date on which no cash was due.

The Company shall, within ten Business Days of a written request from the Holder, deliver a statement signed by an officer showing the principal outstanding, the interest accrued to the date of the statement, and the convention and inputs used to compute it. A statement so delivered binds the Company as to its arithmetic but does not vary any term of this Note.

4. Payments, Application of Payments, and Prepayment

Payments under this Note are made in immediately available funds to the account the Holder designates in writing, and are made without set-off, counterclaim or deduction except any deduction the Company is required by law to make. A payment received after noon on a Business Day is treated as received on the following Business Day for the purpose of computing accrued interest.

A payment received from the Company is applied first to the Holder's costs of enforcement then due, second to accrued and unpaid interest, and third to principal. The Company may not direct a different application, and a notation made by the Company in its own records that a payment was applied differently does not bind the Holder.

The Company may not prepay this Note, in whole or in part, without the Holder's prior written consent. The parties recorded this restriction because the Holder's return on the advance depends on the conversion right rather than on the interest rate, and a prepayment at the Company's election would take that right away. A consent to one prepayment is not a consent to another.

5. Maturity as Extended by Amendment No. 1

The Note originally matured on the date first stated on the signature page. Before that date the Company asked the Holder to extend it, on the ground that the Series B process the Company had begun would not close before the original date and that repayment out of operating cash would have required the Company to slow its deployment programme.

The Holder agreed to the extension by an instrument headed Amendment No. 1 to Convertible Promissory Note, executed by the Company and the Holder and delivered with a copy of the Company's then current financing calendar. Amendment No. 1 extended the Maturity Date to the date stated in it, left the rate and the accrual convention unchanged, and added the quarterly reporting obligation now recorded in Schedule 1.

Amendment No. 1 states that it is the only extension the Holder has agreed to give and that a further extension requires a further written amendment. The Company acknowledged in it that the extension is not a waiver of any right of the Holder and does not constitute a course of dealing on which the Company may rely if it asks for a second extension.

Holder: seed_lead.

Defined terms and conversion provisions govern this note's accrued principal and share calculation.

6. Automatic Conversion upon a Qualified Financing

If the Company closes a Qualified Financing while this Note is outstanding, the principal then outstanding and the interest then accrued convert automatically, without any act of the Holder and without any further instrument, into the securities the Company sells in that financing. Conversion occurs immediately before the closing of the financing and is a condition of it.

The Conversion Price applicable on an automatic conversion is the lower of the two prices determined under the conversion particulars of this Note: a price derived from the Valuation Cap stated on the signature page, and a price derived by applying the discount stated there to the price at which the Company sells preferred stock in the financing. Where the particulars produce the same price on both bases, either basis may be used.

The Company shall give the Holder written notice at least ten Business Days before the expected closing of a Qualified Financing, describing the securities to be sold, the documents the purchasers will sign, and the amount of this Note that will convert. The Holder is not required to sign the purchase agreement for the financing, but shall sign the governance agreements the other purchasers of that series sign.

7. The Holder's Election on a Change of Control

Change of Control means a sale of all or substantially all of the Company's assets, a merger or consolidation in which the Company's stockholders immediately before the transaction do not hold a majority of the voting power of the surviving or acquiring entity immediately after it, or a sale of outstanding shares having that effect, other than a transaction whose principal purpose is to change the Company's domicile or to raise capital.

If a Change of Control is to occur before this Note is repaid or converted, the Holder may elect, by notice given within ten Business Days of the Company's notice of the transaction, either to be repaid the principal outstanding together with the interest accrued and the premium stated in the conversion particulars, or to convert into common stock at the price the particulars specify for this event.

If the Holder makes no election within the period, the Holder is treated as having elected repayment. The Company shall not close a Change of Control unless the amount payable to the Holder on that basis is provided for in the closing arrangements, and shall not agree with an acquirer that this Note survives the closing unless the Holder has consented in writing.

8. Optional Conversion at Maturity

If neither a Qualified Financing nor a Change of Control has occurred by the Maturity Date as extended, the Company shall repay the principal outstanding and the interest accrued on that date. The Holder may instead elect, by notice given at any time up to the Maturity Date, to convert the whole of that amount into shares of the Company's common stock at the price stated in the conversion particulars for a maturity conversion.

An election to convert at maturity is irrevocable once given and applies to the whole of the amount then outstanding; the Holder may not convert part and take repayment of the rest. If the Holder elects to convert, the Company shall deliver the shares within five Business Days of the Maturity Date and the Note is discharged on delivery.

If the Company fails to repay on the Maturity Date and the Holder has not elected to convert, the failure is an Event of Default under Section 11 and the Holder's right to elect conversion continues until the default is cured or the Note is repaid, whichever happens first.

Defined terms and conversion provisions govern this note's accrued principal and share calculation.

9. Mechanics of Conversion and Delivery of Securities

On any conversion the Holder shall surrender this Note to the Company, or deliver a lost-instrument affidavit in a form the Company reasonably requires, and shall deliver the investment representations then customarily given by purchasers of the securities into which the Note converts. The Company shall issue the securities in the Holder's name as it appears on the signature page unless the Holder directs otherwise in writing.

The securities issued on conversion are issued as fully paid and non-assessable, free of any lien created by the Company, and carry the rights and restrictions of the class or series into which the Note converts. Fractional shares are dealt with as the conversion particulars of this Note provide, and the Company shall not adopt a different treatment for the Holder than it applies to other converting instruments of the same class.

Conversion discharges this Note in full. The Company shall mark the Note cancelled, record the cancellation in the register it keeps of its convertible instruments, and deliver to the Holder a statement showing the amount converted and the securities issued. Neither party is thereafter liable to the other in respect of the debt this Note evidenced.

10. Subordination to the Senior Facility

This Note is subordinated in right of payment to the Company's obligations under the revolving credit facility identified in the subordination particulars, and to any refinancing of that facility on terms no more onerous to the Holder. The subordination is a subordination of payment only: it does not subordinate the Holder's conversion right, which may be exercised whether or not the facility is outstanding.

While the facility is outstanding the Company shall not pay principal or interest on this Note if a default exists under the facility, and the Holder shall not receive or retain such a payment if it is made. The Company shall not incur further indebtedness ranking ahead of this Note, other than under the facility and its permitted refinancings, without the Holder's prior written consent.

The Holder has entered into a separate subordination agreement with the senior lender. Where that agreement and this Section differ, the subordination agreement governs as between the Holder and the senior lender, and this Section governs as between the Holder and the Company. Neither instrument entitles the Company to withhold a payment the facility permits it to make.

11. Events of Default, Notice and Cure

Each of the events described in Schedule 3 is an Event of Default. Where a cure period is stated for an event, the event becomes an Event of Default only if it continues unremedied at the end of that period; where none is stated, the event is an Event of Default when it occurs. The Company shall notify the Holder within five Business Days of an officer becoming aware of an event that is or may become an Event of Default.

The Holder's failure to give notice of an Event of Default, or its delay in doing so, does not waive the default or affect any remedy. A waiver of one Event of Default is effective only for that default and does not extend to a later default of the same or a different kind, and no waiver is effective unless it is in writing and signed by the Holder.

Schedule 3 - Events of default, notice and cure under this Note principal: 1500000.

Defined terms and conversion provisions govern this note's accrued principal and share calculation.

12. Remedies and the Standstill Agreed with the Senior Lender

On an Event of Default the Holder may declare the principal outstanding and the interest accrued immediately due and payable, may sue to recover them, and may exercise every other right available at law or in equity. The Holder may also elect, in place of acceleration, to convert the amount then outstanding on the basis the conversion particulars specify for a maturity conversion.

The Holder's right to accelerate is subject to the standstill in the subordination agreement, under which the Holder may not commence an enforcement action for the period stated there after giving notice to the senior lender. The standstill does not prevent the Holder from giving notice of default, from making an election under this Note, or from filing a proof of claim in an insolvency proceeding.

The Company shall pay the Holder's reasonable costs of enforcement, including counsel's fees, whether or not proceedings are commenced. Those costs bear interest from the date incurred at the rate applicable to principal, and are payable before interest and principal under the application of payments in Section 4.

13. Representations of the Holder and Securities-Law Matters

The Holder represents that it is acquiring this Note, and will acquire any security issued on its conversion, for its own account and not with a view to any distribution; that it is an accredited investor (17 C.F.R. § 230.501); that it has had the opportunity to ask questions of the Company's officers and to receive the information it considered necessary; and that it can bear the loss of its entire investment.

The Company issued this Note in reliance on the exemption from registration available for a transaction not involving any public offering (15 U.S.C. § 77d(a)(2)), and made no general solicitation in connection with it. This Note and any security issued on its conversion are restricted securities, and the Holder may not resell them except in a transaction registered under the applicable law or exempt from registration. (17 C.F.R. § 230.144)

The Holder acknowledges that the certificate or book-entry notation for any security issued on conversion will bear the Company's restrictive legend, and that the Company may refuse to record a transfer made otherwise than in accordance with this Section. The Holder shall notify the Company if any representation in this Section ceases to be accurate.

14. Transfer of This Note and Amendment

The Holder may transfer this Note to an affiliate under common management, or to a successor fund managed by the Holder's general partner, on written notice to the Company; any other transfer requires the Company's prior written consent, which the Company may withhold if the proposed transferee is engaged in a business competitive with the Company's. A transferee takes subject to this Note and to the subordination agreement, and shall confirm both in writing.

This Note may be amended only by an instrument in writing signed by the Company and the Holder. No amendment binds the Holder by reason of the consent of holders of other convertible instruments, this Note not being one of a series and there being no requisite-holder mechanism in it.

A purported transfer made without the notice or the consent this Section requires is void, confers no right on the purported transferee, and does not oblige the Company to recognise the purported transferee for any purpose. The Company shall record every permitted transfer in the register described in Section 15 within five Business Days of receiving the transferee's written confirmation.

15. Covenants of the Company While This Note Is Outstanding

The Company shall keep authorised and reserved, out of its authorised but unissued shares, a number of shares sufficient to permit the conversion of this Note under each of Sections 6, 7 and 8, and shall take the corporate action necessary to increase that reservation if the number becomes insufficient. The Company shall not amend its certificate of incorporation in a way that makes the conversion of this Note impossible.

The Company shall maintain a register of its outstanding convertible instruments showing, for each, the holder, the instrument's date, the amount outstanding and whether it has been amended, and shall make the entry relating to this Note available to the Holder on request. The register is an administrative record; it does not vary any instrument recorded in it, and a discrepancy between the register and this Note is resolved in favour of this Note.

The Company shall deliver to the Holder, within forty-five days of the end of each of its fiscal quarters, the quarterly report Amendment No. 1 requires, together with a statement of the balance then outstanding under the senior facility. The Company shall notify the Holder promptly if it enters into an amendment of that facility that changes the facility's maturity or its permitted principal amount.

16. Notices, Governing Law and Administrative Provisions

Notices are given in writing to the addresses in the notice particulars, by personal delivery, by nationally recognised overnight courier or by electronic mail with written confirmation of receipt, and are deemed given on delivery or, for electronic mail, on confirmation. A party may change its address for notices by giving notice in the same manner, and a notice sent to a superseded address is not effective.

This Note is governed by the law of the State of Delaware without regard to its conflict-of-laws rules, and the parties submit to the non-exclusive jurisdiction of the state and federal courts sitting in that State. If a provision of this Note is held unenforceable, the remaining provisions continue in effect and the unenforceable provision is treated as modified to the least extent necessary to make it enforceable.

This Note may be executed in counterparts and an electronically transmitted signature has the same effect as an original. The Company shall keep the executed Note, Amendment No. 1 and the schedules to both in a single file, and shall not circulate an extract of the Note without the schedules to which the extract refers.
