Administration and Enforcement

note kadence records payment mechanics, interest accrual, maturity, conversion events, default remedies, transfer restrictions, amendment thresholds, and formal notice addresses.

Accrued principal and conversion consideration are determined at the applicable event date; an internal summary does not modify the signed instrument.

Waiver of one default or covenant does not waive a later breach, and permitted assignments remain subject to written assumption of the instrument obligations.

Article 1. Purpose of the Note and the Commercial Relationship It Accompanies

This Convertible Promissory Note evidences money lent to Helioscope Robotics, Inc. by Kadence Industrial Holdings, Inc., a corporation that buys the Company's products for its own distribution centres and is accordingly both a lender and a customer. The Note was negotiated at the same time as the supply arrangements between the same parties, and each instrument was signed on the understanding that the other would be signed as well.

Neither instrument is conditioned on the other. A default under the supply arrangements is not a default under this Note, and a default under this Note does not entitle either party to suspend performance of the supply arrangements. The parties recorded that separation deliberately, so that a commercial dispute about delivery cannot become a dispute about the repayment of borrowed money.

The Lender is not the Company's affiliate, holds no seat on the Company's board, and takes no part in the Company's management. The observer right in Article 10 is the whole of the Lender's participation in the Company's governance, and the information rights in Article 9 are the whole of its access to the Company's records in its capacity as Lender.

Article 2. Construction and Defined Terms

Words defined on the signature page have the meaning given there wherever they appear in this Note. Where a figure is stated on the signature page and a different figure appears in a summary, a report to a credit committee or a spreadsheet maintained by either party, the signature page controls and the other document is of no effect as against the party it disadvantages.

Qualified Financing means a sale by the Company of a series of preferred stock for cash to one or more investors, at or above the aggregate amount stated on the signature page, whose primary purpose is to raise capital. A sale to the Lender or to another strategic purchaser as part of a commercial transaction is not a Qualified Financing unless the parties agree in writing that it is.

Competitor means a person carrying on a business that competes with the Company's business, determined at the time the question arises and by reference to the list the parties maintain under Article 11. A person is not a Competitor merely because it holds a passive interest in a Competitor through a fund in which it has no control rights.

Article 3. Principal Sum and the Basis on Which Interest Accrues

The principal sum lent is the sum stated on the signature page and was advanced in full on the date of issuance. Interest accrues on that sum, and on so much of it as remains outstanding from time to time, at the rate stated on the signature page, computed on the day-count convention stated there and not on any other convention either party may prefer for its own reporting.

The parties chose the stated convention because the Lender's treasury function accounts for intercompany and third-party advances on that basis, and because a single convention applied throughout the life of the Note avoids the reconciliation differences that arise when a lender and a borrower each compute accruals on their own footing. The Company shall apply the stated convention in its own accounts as well.

Interest is not compounded and is not added to principal. It is payable only on repayment or, on a conversion, is dealt with as Article 5 provides. No payment of interest falls due before the Maturity Date, and the absence of a payment date before then does not mean that interest ceases to accrue in any period.

Article 4. Repayment at Maturity and the Absence of a Prepayment Right

Unless it has converted, the Note is repayable in full on the Maturity Date stated on the signature page, together with the interest then accrued. The Company shall give the Lender written notice thirty days before the Maturity Date stating the amount it expects to pay and the account from which it will pay, and shall notify the Lender at once if it expects not to be able to pay.

The Company has no right to prepay, and the Lender has no right to demand early repayment except on an Event of Default. The parties considered a prepayment right exercisable on the Company's completion of a financing that was not a Qualified Financing and did not adopt one, on the Lender's view that a lender who has accepted a below-market rate in exchange for a conversion right should not have that right bought out at the borrower's election.

If the Company offers to prepay and the Lender accepts in writing, the prepayment is applied first to interest accrued to the date of receipt and then to principal, and the Lender's conversion right continues in respect of any balance that remains outstanding after the prepayment.

Article 5. Conversion on a Qualified Financing

On the closing of a Qualified Financing the principal outstanding and the interest accrued convert into the series of preferred stock the Company sells in that financing. Conversion takes effect immediately before that closing, and the Lender is treated for all purposes as a purchaser of that series who paid the converted amount as its subscription price.

The price at which the converted amount is applied is derived from the Valuation Cap stated on the signature page, calculated as the conversion particulars of this Note provide. The Lender shall sign the governance agreements the other purchasers of that series sign, and shall be entitled to the rights of that series except where a right is expressly reserved to purchasers investing new money.

If the Company closes a Qualified Financing in more than one tranche, the whole of the amount outstanding converts at the first tranche, and the Lender is not entitled or obliged to convert part at one tranche and part at another. The Company shall give the Lender fifteen Business Days' notice of the expected first closing.

Article 6. Absence of a Discount and the Consequence for the Conversion Basis

This Note carries no discount to the price at which the Company sells preferred stock in a Qualified Financing. The conversion basis is the Valuation Cap alone. The parties recorded that in the instrument because the Lender's commercial return on the relationship comes from the supply arrangements rather than from the financing terms, and because the Company resisted a term that would have priced the Lender below its other convertible holders on both bases at once.

The consequence is that if the Company's next priced round is completed at a pre-money valuation below the Valuation Cap, this Note converts at the round price and not at a price derived from the Cap, and the Lender obtains no advantage over the investors who subscribe for new money in that round. The Lender accepted that outcome when the Note was negotiated.

No provision of this Note entitles the Lender to the benefit of a discount, a cap or any other economic term granted to a holder of another convertible instrument of the Company, whether that instrument was issued before or after this Note. The Lender expressly acknowledges that it holds no most-favoured-nation right of any kind.

Defined terms and conversion provisions govern this note's accrued principal and share calculation.

Article 7. Antitrust Clearance as a Condition to the Issuance of Conversion Shares

The parties recognise that the issuance of conversion shares to the Lender may, depending on the size of the resulting holding and on the value of the assets and revenues of the persons concerned, require a premerger notification to be filed and a waiting period to expire before the shares may be issued. (15 U.S.C. § 18a)

If counsel to either party advises that a notification is required, the Company shall not issue the conversion shares until the filings have been made and the applicable waiting period has expired or been terminated, and the Lender's right to receive the shares is suspended, not lost, during that period. Each party shall prepare its own filing, shall cooperate in producing the information the other needs, and shall bear its own costs. (16 C.F.R. pt. 801)

If the waiting period has not expired by the closing of the Qualified Financing, the converted amount is held by the Company as an obligation to issue the shares on expiry, the Lender is entered in the Company's records as a person entitled to those shares, and the Lender is not entitled to vote or to receive distributions in respect of them until they are issued.

Article 8. Change of Control: Notice, Consultation and Repayment

If the Company proposes to enter into a transaction that would result in a change of control, it shall notify the Lender at least twenty Business Days before the transaction is to be signed, describing the counterparty in general terms, the structure proposed and the expected treatment of the Company's convertible instruments. The Lender shall keep that notice confidential and shall restrict it to the persons the firewall protocol permits.

The Lender is entitled to consultation, not to consent. It may, within ten Business Days of the notice, state in writing its view of the effect of the transaction on the supply arrangements and on the Note, and the Company shall consider that statement and shall record in its board materials that it did so. The Company is not obliged to change the transaction and the Lender may not delay it.

On the closing of a change of control the Note is repaid in full, with the interest accrued, unless the Lender elects in writing to convert on the basis stated in the conversion particulars for that event. The Company shall not agree with an acquirer that the Note is assumed rather than repaid or converted unless the Lender has consented in writing to the assumption.

Defined terms and conversion provisions govern this note's accrued principal and share calculation.

Article 9. Information Rights and the Firewall Protocol

The Company shall deliver to the Lender its annual financial statements within one hundred and twenty days of each fiscal year end and its quarterly statements within forty-five days of each fiscal quarter end, in each case prepared on the basis the Company then uses for its own management reporting. The Company is not obliged to prepare statements to a standard it does not otherwise apply.

Because the Lender is also a customer, the information delivered under this Article is subject to the firewall protocol in Exhibit 1. The protocol identifies the categories of information the Company will supply, the persons within the Lender's organisation who may receive each category, the categories the Company may withhold, and the period for which the Lender must retain what it receives.

The Lender shall not use information received under this Article in the negotiation of the supply arrangements, in the pricing of any purchase order, or in the preparation of a competing product, and shall procure that the persons to whom it discloses the information observe the same restriction. A breach of the protocol entitles the Company to suspend delivery of information until the breach is remedied.

Article 10. The Lender's Board Observer Right

The Lender may designate one individual to attend meetings of the Company's board as an observer while this Note remains outstanding. The observer receives the notice of meeting and the materials circulated to directors, subject to the exclusions in the firewall protocol, and may speak at the meeting when invited to do so by the chair.

The observer is not a director, does not vote, is not counted for quorum, and owes no fiduciary duty to the Company; nor does the Company owe the observer the duties it owes a director. The Company may exclude the observer from any portion of a meeting in which the board considers the supply arrangements, a competing supply relationship, a matter in which the Lender has an interest, or a matter as to which the board is advised that the observer's presence would prejudice privilege.

The observer shall sign a confidentiality undertaking in the form the Company requires before attending a first meeting, and the Lender shall procure that the observer observes the firewall protocol. The Lender may replace its designee on notice, and the right terminates when the Note is repaid or converted.

Article 11. Restrictions on Transfer to a Competitor

The Lender may not transfer this Note, or any security issued on its conversion, to a Competitor. The Lender may transfer to a wholly owned subsidiary of the Lender that is not a Competitor, on notice to the Company and on the transferee's written assumption of the Lender's obligations under this Note and under the firewall protocol.

The parties maintain a list of Competitors, which the Company may update twice a year by notice to the Lender. The Lender may object to an addition within fifteen Business Days, stating its grounds, and the parties shall discuss the objection in good faith; if they do not agree, the addition stands unless the Lender establishes that the added person does not carry on a competing business.

A transfer made in breach of this Article is void and the Company shall not record it. The Company may refuse to record any transfer until it has received the transferee's assumption, the transferee's investment representations, and counsel's confirmation that the transfer does not require registration.

Defined terms and conversion provisions govern this note's accrued principal and share calculation.

Article 12. Events of Default and the Lender's Remedies

It is an Event of Default if the Company fails to repay the Note when due, fails to issue conversion shares when obliged to do so and does not remedy the failure within ten Business Days of notice, breaches the covenant in Article 15 and does not remedy the breach within twenty days of notice, or becomes the subject of an insolvency proceeding that is not dismissed within sixty-one days.

A misstatement in a certificate the Company delivers under this Note is an Event of Default only if it is material and is not corrected within ten Business Days of the Company becoming aware of it. A failure to deliver information under Article 9 is not an Event of Default; the Lender's remedy for such a failure is specific performance and its costs of obtaining it.

On an Event of Default the Lender may declare the amount outstanding immediately due and payable and may pursue any remedy at law or in equity. The Lender shall not exercise a remedy under the supply arrangements by reason of an Event of Default under this Note, and the Company shall not treat an Event of Default as terminating the observer right before the Note is discharged.

Article 13. Representations of the Lender and Securities-Law Matters

The Lender represents that it is an accredited investor (17 C.F.R. § 230.501), that it is lending for its own account, that it has such knowledge and experience in financial and business matters as to be able to evaluate the risks of the loan, and that it has not relied on any statement of the Company other than the representations recorded in this Note.

The Company issued this Note without any public offering and without general solicitation, in reliance on the private-placement exemption (15 U.S.C. § 77d(a)(2)). The Lender acknowledges that this Note and any security issued on its conversion are restricted securities, that no market for them exists or is expected to exist, and that it must be prepared to hold them indefinitely.

The Lender further represents that it is not acquiring the Note with a view to obtaining control of the Company, that it holds no other security of the Company except as disclosed in the schedule of the Lender's holdings delivered at issuance, and that it will notify the Company before acquiring any further security of the Company otherwise than under this Note.

Article 14. Notices, Amendment and Assignment by the Company

Notices under this Note are given to the addresses recorded in the notice particulars and are effective on delivery, or on the next Business Day if delivered after business hours at the place of receipt. A notice to the Lender in its capacity as Lender is not notice to it in its capacity as customer, and a notice given under the supply arrangements is not notice under this Note.

This Note may be amended only in writing signed by the Company and the Lender. The Company may not assign its obligations under this Note, whether by operation of law or otherwise, except to a successor that acquires substantially all of its business and assumes the Note in writing; the Lender's consent is not required for such an assumption but notice to the Lender is.

No failure or delay by either party in exercising a right under this Note operates as a waiver of it, and a single or partial exercise does not preclude a further exercise. A waiver is effective only in the instance and for the purpose for which it is given.

Article 15. Company Covenants and Administrative Provisions

While this Note is outstanding the Company shall keep reserved a sufficient number of shares to satisfy a conversion, shall maintain its corporate existence in good standing, shall keep books and records adequate to support the statements it delivers under this Note, and shall not incur indebtedness secured on substantially all of its assets other than under its existing facility and permitted refinancings.

The Company shall notify the Lender within ten Business Days of the issuance of any further convertible instrument, identifying the instrument's type and date but not the identity of its holder or its economic terms, which the Lender acknowledges it is not entitled to receive under this Note. That notice is given for the Lender's record-keeping only and confers no right to compare terms.

This Note is governed by the law of the State of Delaware, may be executed in counterparts, and is severable so that the invalidity of one provision does not affect the rest. The Company shall keep this Note, the firewall protocol and the exhibits in one file and shall provide the Lender with a complete copy on request.

Article 16. Obligations That Survive the Discharge of This Note

The discharge of this Note, whether by repayment or by conversion, does not end the firewall protocol, which continues to bind the Lender in respect of information it received while the Note was outstanding for as long as that information remains confidential. Nor does it end the Lender's obligation not to use such information in the negotiation of the supply arrangements.

The observer right ends on discharge, and the observer's confidentiality undertaking continues according to its own terms. The Lender shall procure that the observer returns or destroys the board materials it holds within twenty Business Days of the discharge and confirms in writing that it has done so.

The representations in Article 13 survive discharge in respect of the period to which they relate, and the Company may rely on them in establishing the exemption on which it relied at issuance. No other provision of this Note survives its discharge.
