Administration and Enforcement

note tessellate bridge records payment mechanics, interest accrual, maturity, conversion events, default remedies, transfer restrictions, amendment thresholds, and formal notice addresses.

Accrued principal and conversion consideration are determined at the applicable event date; an internal summary does not modify the signed instrument.

Waiver of one default or covenant does not waive a later breach, and permitted assignments remain subject to written assumption of the instrument obligations.

Recitals

The Company required working capital to carry it from the completion of its Series A financing to the priced round it then expected to raise, and its board resolved to raise that capital from its existing investors rather than from a new lender, so that the terms of the bridge would be settled with holders who already knew the business and so that no new party would acquire rights in the interval.

The bridge was accordingly offered to each holder entitled to participate under the Company's existing agreements, in proportion to that holder's holding, on the terms recorded in this Note. Tessellate Ventures I, L.P., which led the Series A financing, subscribed for its full proportion and agreed to advance its subscription in two tranches so that the Company would not hold cash it did not yet need.

This Note is one of a series of notes issued in that bridge, identical in their terms except as to the identity of the holder and the amount advanced. Where this Note refers to the Notes it refers to the whole series, and where it refers to the Requisite Holders it refers to the holders whose consent is required under Article Twelve to bind the series.

Article One. Interpretation

Defined terms used in this Note bear the meanings given on the signature page or in the particulars attached to it. A reference to an Article is a reference to an Article of this Note. Where this Note and another Note of the series differ in a term that the series was intended to share, the holders shall treat the difference as a manifest error and shall correct it by an instrument signed by the Company and the Requisite Holders.

Next Equity Financing means the Company's next issue of preferred stock for cash whose primary purpose is to raise capital, whether or not it reaches the threshold that makes it a Qualified Financing. Qualified Financing means a Next Equity Financing whose aggregate gross proceeds are at or above the threshold stated on the signature page.

Second Tranche Condition means the operating condition described in Article Four, measured as Annex A provides. Term Set means the whole of the economic and conversion terms of this Note, taken together and not separately, as Article Nine requires.

Article Two. The Principal Advanced and the Tranche Structure

The Holder subscribed for the principal amount stated on the signature page and agreed to advance it in two tranches. The first tranche was advanced on the date of issuance and the Note took effect on that advance. The second tranche is advanceable only if the Second Tranche Condition is satisfied and is not otherwise an obligation of the Holder.

Each tranche, once advanced, forms part of the principal outstanding under this one Note; the tranches are not separate instruments and do not carry separate maturities or separate conversion rights. Interest accrues on each tranche from the date that tranche is advanced, so that the second tranche accrues nothing in respect of the period before its advance.

If the second tranche is not advanced the Note continues in force in respect of the first tranche alone, and no reduction is made to the Holder's rights by reason of the shortfall. The Company may not draw the second tranche from another lender on terms more favourable than this Note without offering those terms to the Holder first.

Article Three. Interest, Day-Count Basis and the Treatment of Accrued Interest

Interest accrues on the principal outstanding at the rate stated on the signature page, computed on the day-count basis stated there. Accrued interest is not paid in cash at any time before the event that discharges the Note. On a conversion the accrued interest converts with the principal and is not paid out, and on a repayment it is paid with the principal.

The Company shall compute the accrued interest on each Note of the series on the same basis, and shall deliver to the Requisite Holders, with each notice of a conversion event, a schedule showing the computation for every Note of the series. A holder may query the computation within five Business Days and the Company shall correct any arithmetical error before the event.

Interest does not compound, and no default interest is charged; the parties agreed instead that the Holder's remedies on a default would be those in Article Twelve and that the rate would remain the same throughout, so that an insider bridge would not become a punitive instrument in the hands of an existing investor.

Article Four. The Second Tranche Condition

The Second Tranche Condition is the operating test described on the signature page and measured as Annex A provides. The Company shall prepare the computation, have it certified by an officer, and deliver it to each holder of a Note of the series within the period Annex A states. The Company shall use the same data and the same adjustments for every holder.

A holder may query the computation within the review period Annex A allows. The Company shall answer a query in writing and shall correct an error that the query establishes. If the Requisite Holders and the Company disagree on whether the condition is satisfied after the queries have been answered, the question is referred to the Company's auditors, whose determination is final as to the computation but not as to the construction of the condition.

If the condition is satisfied the Company may call the second tranche by notice, and each holder shall advance its proportion within ten Business Days. If the condition is not satisfied the second tranche lapses and no holder is obliged to advance it, notwithstanding that the Company may by then have incurred expenditure in expectation of the advance.

Operative instrument term 1

Holder: series_a_lead.

Defined terms and conversion provisions govern this note's accrued principal and share calculation.

Article Five. No Prepayment; Application of Amounts Received

The Company may not prepay any Note of the series without the consent of the Requisite Holders, and may not prepay one Note without offering to prepay every Note of the series in the same proportion. The parties adopted that restriction so that the Company could not choose which of its existing investors to retire and which to leave outstanding through a priced round.

An amount the Company pays or applies in respect of the Notes is applied among them in proportion to the amounts then outstanding under each, and within a Note is applied first to the holder's enforcement costs then due, second to accrued interest and third to principal. The Company shall record each application in the register and shall deliver the record to each holder.

A payment received by a holder in excess of its proportion is held for the holders of the series and shall be paid over so that each holder receives its proportion. This sharing provision survives the discharge of the Notes and binds a transferee of a Note.

Article Six. Conversion on a Qualified Financing at a Discount to the Round Price

On the closing of a Qualified Financing the amount outstanding under this Note converts into the securities the Company sells in that financing. The price applied is the lower of a price derived from the Valuation Cap stated on the signature page and a price derived by applying the discount stated there to the price paid by the purchasers of new money in the financing, in each case as the conversion particulars provide.

Conversion is automatic and requires no election. The Company shall notify each holder at least ten Business Days before the expected closing, stating the amount that will convert under that holder's Note and the two prices the particulars produce. A holder may query the statement within five Business Days and the Company shall correct an arithmetical error before the closing.

The Holder shall sign the governance agreements the purchasers of the new series sign, shall deliver the investment representations those purchasers deliver, and shall surrender this Note. The Holder is not obliged to invest new money in the financing as a condition of conversion, and no provision of this Note conditions the Holder's conversion on such an investment.

Article Seven. Priority Among the Company's Convertible Instruments

The Company has issued other convertible instruments, some of which are not notes and carry no interest and no maturity. On a conversion event each instrument converts on its own terms, and this Note neither takes priority over nor is subordinated to another convertible instrument in respect of conversion.

On a liquidation or a dissolution, however, this Note is a debt of the Company and ranks ahead of every instrument that is not a debt of the Company, including every instrument that provides only for the future issue of equity. The Company shall not represent to a holder of such an instrument that it ranks equally with the Notes.

The Company shall not issue an instrument that purports to rank ahead of the Notes on a liquidation without the consent of the Requisite Holders, other than indebtedness for borrowed money incurred from a bank or other institutional lender in the ordinary course and within the limit stated in the covenant particulars.

Article Eight. Delivery of This Note to Holders Entitled to Compare Terms

The Company has issued convertible instruments that entitle their holders, on the issue of a later convertible instrument, to receive a copy of that later instrument and to compare its terms with their own. The Company shall accordingly deliver a copy of this Note, with its particulars, to each holder so entitled, within the period that holder's instrument requires.

The Company delivered a copy of this Note under that obligation, and the holder to which it was delivered gave notice that it elected to take the benefit of the Term Set of this Note in place of the corresponding terms of its own instrument. The election, and the Term Set it adopted, are recorded in the election particulars filed with the Company's convertible instrument records.

That election alters the electing holder's instrument and does not alter this Note. The Holder of this Note obtains no right, and loses no right, by reason of the election, and the Company shall not represent to the Holder that the election has changed the basis on which this Note converts.

Operative instrument term 2

issue_date: 2025-06-30.

Defined terms and conversion provisions govern this note's accrued principal and share calculation.

Article Nine. The Term Set Read as a Whole

The economic and conversion terms of this Note were agreed as a package. The rate, the day-count basis, the maturity, the Valuation Cap, the discount and the tranche structure were traded against one another in the negotiation, and a person comparing this Note with another instrument must compare the whole of the Term Set and not a single term taken out of it.

The Company shall not deliver, and shall not authorise an officer to deliver, a summary of this Note that states one economic term without the others, except in a register entry that identifies the Note and directs the reader to the instrument. A summary delivered in breach of this Article does not vary the Note and does not estop the Holder.

Nothing in this Article gives the Holder a right to compare its terms with those of another instrument. The Holder has no most-favoured-nation right, and the obligations in Article Eight are owed to other holders and not to the Holder of this Note.

Article Ten. Change of Control and the Holder's Election

If a change of control is to occur before this Note is discharged, the Company shall notify each holder of the series at least fifteen Business Days before the transaction is signed. Each holder may then elect, for its own Note, either repayment of the amount outstanding together with the premium stated in the conversion particulars, or conversion into common stock at the price those particulars specify.

An election is made by notice to the Company within ten Business Days of the Company's notice and is irrevocable. A holder that does not elect is treated as having elected repayment. Holders may elect differently from one another, and the Company shall give effect to each election separately.

The Company shall not close a change of control unless provision has been made for each holder's election, and shall not agree that the Notes are assumed by an acquirer unless the Requisite Holders have consented. A holder's election under this Article does not affect the sharing provision in Article Five.

Article Eleven. Pro-Rata Participation in the Next Equity Financing

The Holder may participate in the Next Equity Financing, on the same terms as the other purchasers in it, up to the proportion stated in the participation particulars. The right is in addition to, and not in substitution for, the conversion of this Note, and an amount invested under this Article is new money and is not applied against the amount converting.

The Company shall give the Holder notice of the Next Equity Financing at the same time as it gives notice to the purchasers, and shall allow the Holder ten Business Days to state the amount it will invest. If the Holder does not respond within that period the right lapses for that financing only.

The right terminates on the discharge of this Note, and is not transferable except to a transferee of the Note that is an affiliate of the Holder. A holder that does not exercise the right in one financing does not lose it for a later one.

Operative instrument term 3

principal: 2000000.

Defined terms and conversion provisions govern this note's accrued principal and share calculation.

Article Twelve. Events of Default, Acceleration and Requisite-Holder Action

The events listed in Annex C are Events of Default. On the occurrence of an Event of Default the Requisite Holders may declare the whole of the amounts outstanding under the Notes immediately due and payable by notice to the Company, and an individual holder may not accelerate its own Note alone. A holder may sue for its own amount once an acceleration has been declared.

The Requisite Holders may waive an Event of Default, may rescind an acceleration before judgment, and may agree with the Company on the terms of a cure, in each case by notice to the Company and to the holders. A waiver binds every holder, including a holder that did not consent, but no waiver may reduce the principal or the interest payable to a holder without that holder's consent.

The Company shall pay the enforcement costs of the Requisite Holders and of any holder that joins an action commenced by them. Costs incurred by a holder acting alone before an acceleration has been declared are that holder's own.

Annex C - Events of default under the Notes and the action available

Event	Cure period	Who may act	Action available	Effect on the series
Failure to repay at maturity	None	Requisite Holders	Acceleration	All Notes accelerate
Failure to pay after acceleration	None	Each holder	Suit for its own amount	Individual remedy

Article Thirteen. Investment Representations and Restricted Securities

The Holder represents that it is an accredited investor (17 C.F.R. § 230.501), that it subscribed for this Note for investment and not with a view to distribution, that it received no general solicitation or general advertising in connection with the bridge (17 C.F.R. § 230.502), and that it had access to the Company's records and to its officers before subscribing.

The Company issued the Notes in reliance on the exemption available for a limited offering to accredited investors (17 C.F.R. § 230.506(b)) and has made the notice filing that exemption requires (17 C.F.R. § 230.503). The Notes and the securities issuable on their conversion are restricted securities, may not be resold except under a registration or an exemption, and will bear the Company's restrictive legend.

The Holder acknowledges that it is an existing investor in the Company, that it took the bridge on terms settled among insiders rather than in an arm's-length negotiation with a new lender, and that it has satisfied itself independently as to the fairness of those terms.

Article Fourteen. Transfer, Register, Notices and Miscellaneous

A holder may transfer its Note to an affiliate or to a fund under common management on notice to the Company, and otherwise only with the Company's consent. The Company shall maintain a register of the Notes showing for each the holder, the amounts advanced by tranche, the interest accrued at the last computation and any transfer recorded, and shall treat the registered holder as the person entitled to the Note.

This Note may be amended, and a provision of it waived, by an instrument signed by the Company and the Requisite Holders, except that an amendment that changes the principal, the rate, the maturity or the conversion basis of a Note requires the consent of the holder of that Note. Annex D records the consent required for each subject matter.

Notices are given to the addresses in the notice particulars and take effect on delivery. This Note is governed by the law of the State of Delaware, may be signed in counterparts, and is severable. The Company shall keep the Notes of the series, their particulars and the annexes in one file so that the series can be read together.

Annex D - Consent required to amend or waive, by subject matter

Subject matter	Consent required	Form	Effect on a non-consenting holder	Notice
Principal amount of a Note	That holder	Signed amendment	Not bound	To all holders

Article Fifteen. Costs of the Bridge and the Holders' Expenses

The Company paid the fees of the counsel that prepared the Notes and the participation offer, and each holder bore its own costs of subscribing. The parties adopted that allocation because the bridge was offered to insiders on identical terms and no holder negotiated the documents on behalf of the others.

The Company shall pay the reasonable costs of the Requisite Holders in considering a waiver or an amendment that the Company requests, whether or not the waiver or amendment is granted, up to the limit stated in the expense particulars. A holder that instructs its own counsel in addition bears that cost itself.

Costs of enforcement are dealt with in Article Twelve and are not subject to the limit in the expense particulars. A holder that recovers its costs of enforcement shall account for them under the sharing provision in Article Five if it recovers more than its proportion.
