SAFE_ADVISOR

Instrument terms

Holder: advisor.

issue_date: 2026-02-27.

purchase_amount: 400000.

cap: 150000000.

cap_basis: Q.

family: post.

discount: 0.20.

mfn: False.

Defined Events and Administration

safe advisor separately defines an equity financing, liquidity event, dissolution event, conversion security, company capitalization, and the investor's purchase amount.

The treatment applicable at an event follows the signed SAFE's own cap, discount, family, and amendment provisions rather than a later spreadsheet recap.

Notices, assignment, governing law, counterpart execution, and amendment consent complete the operative instrument and remain effective with its economic terms.

1. This Instrument and Its Relationship to the Advisory Agreement

This instrument records an agreement between Helioscope Robotics, Inc. and an individual who advises the Company on the design of its warehouse control systems. The Investor signed a separate advisory agreement with the Company, and this instrument was signed on the same day, but the two are independent and each stands on its own terms.

The Investor paid cash for this instrument. It was not granted to him as consideration for his services, is not part of his remuneration under the advisory agreement, and would have been available to him on the same terms had he not been an adviser. The Company records that expressly because an instrument issued to a service provider is easily mistaken for compensation.

The advisory agreement provides separately for the Investor's fees and for the reimbursement of his expenses. Nothing in this instrument entitles him to a fee, and nothing in the advisory agreement entitles him to a security. A default under one document is not a default under the other, except as Section 9 provides.

2. The Purchase Amount Paid in Cash

The Investor paid the Purchase Amount stated on the signature page in cash, from his own funds, by transfer from an account in his own name. The Company acknowledged receipt and applied the sum to its general working capital. No part of the Purchase Amount was satisfied by the setting off of a fee owed to the Investor under the advisory agreement.

The Company confirmed with the Investor before accepting the subscription that he had taken his own advice, that the amount he was investing was one he could afford to lose, and that he understood that the Company might never complete a financing. The Investor confirmed each of those matters in writing.

The Purchase Amount is not refundable in any circumstances, including the termination of the advisory relationship. The Investor's rights are the entitlements that arise on the three defined events, and he has no right to require the Company to return his money at any time.

3. Equity Financing and the Basis on Which This Instrument Converts

The event that turns this instrument into stock is an Equity Financing, meaning a capital-raising in which the Company prices and sells a series of its preferred stock, counted as a single event where it is completed in stages on substantially identical terms. When such a financing closes no act of the Investor is called for: the Purchase Amount is applied to preferred stock at that closing and the instrument is discharged by the issue.

The number of shares issued is determined as the conversion particulars provide, applying whichever of two bases produces the greater number of shares for the Investor: a basis derived from the Valuation Cap stated on the signature page, and a basis derived by applying the discount stated there to the price paid by the purchasers of new money in the financing. This instrument is one of the few of the Company's instruments of this kind to carry both terms.

The instrument is on the post-money form, so the capitalisation to which the Cap is applied is measured after the conversion of instruments of this kind, as the capitalisation particulars provide. The Company shall deliver the calculation, certified by an officer, at least ten Business Days before the expected closing, and shall state in it which of the two bases it has applied.

4. The Discount and the Events in Which It Does Not Apply

The discount stated on the signature page applies only on an Equity Financing. It does not apply on a Liquidity Event, on a Dissolution Event, or on any other occasion on which the Investor becomes entitled to a payment or to shares. The parties recorded that limitation expressly, because a discount expressed without a limitation is often read as applying to every event.

The reason for the limitation is that the discount was agreed as compensation for the risk of subscribing before a priced round had been arranged, and that risk is spent once a priced round has been arranged. On a sale of the Company or on a winding up the Investor's position is measured against the consideration actually available, and the parties saw no reason to give the Investor a discount against that.

Where the Cap basis and the discount basis produce the same number of shares on an Equity Financing, the Company may apply either and shall record which it applied. Where the discount basis produces fewer shares, the Cap basis applies, and the Investor obtains no benefit from the discount in that financing.

Annex 1 - Which economic terms apply at which event

Event	Valuation Cap basis	Discount basis	What the Investor receives	Where stated
Equity Financing above the Cap	Applies	Applies; better basis used	Preferred stock	Conversion particulars
Equity Financing at or below the Cap	Not operative	Applies	Preferred stock	Conversion particulars
Change of control	Applies	Does not apply	Cash amount or common stock	Conversion particulars
Initial public offering	Applies	Does not apply	Common stock	Conversion particulars
Direct listing	Applies	Does not apply	Common stock	Conversion particulars
Dissolution Event	Not operative	Does not apply	The Purchase Amount if funds allow	Section 6
Termination of the advisory relationship	Unaffected	Unaffected	Nothing; the instrument continues	Section 9
Death of the Investor	Unaffected	Unaffected	Nothing; the instrument passes	Section 12

5. Liquidity Event

Liquidity Event bears the meaning the conversion particulars give it, and takes in a sale of the Company, a listing and an admission to trading without an offering. Should one occur while this instrument is outstanding, the Investor takes either a payment in cash or shares of common stock, computed on the Purchase Amount with no discount applied, and computed as at the moment immediately preceding the event. The choice belongs to the Investor where the transaction produces cash to distribute; where it produces none, only the share alternative is open to him.

The Investor shall give notice of his election within the period the particulars allow, and shall be treated as electing the cash amount if he does not. The Company shall give him notice of an expected event at the same time as it gives notice to the holders of its other instruments of this kind, and shall not exclude him because he is an individual rather than an institution.

The Investor's entitlement ranks with those of the holders of the Company's other instruments of this kind, ahead of common stock and behind the Company's indebtedness. If the consideration available is insufficient to pay every such holder, it is shared among them in proportion to their entitlements.

Operative instrument term 1

Holder: advisor.

The advisor SAFE applies its own discount, conversion, and amendment definitions to this term.

6. Dissolution Event

A Dissolution Event is what the conversion particulars describe: the Company ceasing to trade of its own motion, handing its assets over to its creditors generally, or being wound up in circumstances that are not a Liquidity Event. Should one happen, the Purchase Amount is returnable to the Investor out of whatever remains for the holders of the Company's stock, and is returnable before anything reaches the holders of common stock, though only once the Company's creditors have been dealt with.

If the assets available are insufficient to pay every holder of an instrument of this kind its Purchase Amount, they are shared in proportion to those amounts and the shortfall is not recoverable. The Investor is not a creditor in respect of the Purchase Amount and may not prove for it as a debt.

7. The Valuation Cap and the Post-Money Basis

The Valuation Cap stated on the signature page is the highest company value at which the Purchase Amount converts on an Equity Financing. Because this instrument is on the post-money form, the proportion the Investor obtains is not reduced by the conversion of another instrument of this kind at the same closing.

The Cap was agreed at a level that reflected the Company's most recent priced round and the progress it had made since. The Investor did not negotiate the Cap; he was offered the terms on which the Company was then issuing instruments of this kind to individuals, and he accepted them.

The Cap is not adjusted for the passage of time or for the Investor's continued service. The Company shall not agree with the Investor to adjust it except by a written amendment signed by both, and shall not adjust it administratively by recording a different figure in its register.

8. No Pro-Rata Right and No Information Right

This instrument gives the Investor no right to participate in the Equity Financing or in any later financing, and no side letter was delivered with it. The Company does not grant participation rights to individuals holding instruments of this kind, on the ground that an allocation to an individual is difficult to administer in a round whose allocation is negotiated with institutions.

The Investor has no right to the Company's financial statements, to its board materials, to its capitalisation record or to any other information in his capacity as holder of this instrument. Information he receives in his capacity as adviser is governed by the advisory agreement and by Section 11, and he shall not use it in that other capacity.

The Company shall notify the Investor of a defined event as this instrument requires, and shall deliver the conversion calculation as Section 3 requires. Those are the whole of the Company's information obligations to him as holder.

9. Effect of the Termination of the Advisory Relationship

The termination of the advisory agreement, for any reason and by either party, does not affect this instrument. The instrument is not forfeited, is not repurchasable, does not lapse, and does not convert early. The Investor keeps it on the terms on which he bought it, because he bought it for cash and not for services.

The Company considered whether to make the instrument repurchasable on a termination for cause and decided not to, on its counsel's advice that a repurchase right would make an instrument bought for cash look like a compensatory award and would raise questions the Company did not wish to raise. The Investor was told of that reasoning before he subscribed.

The only consequence of a termination for this instrument is administrative: the Company shall record the termination against the register entry so that a later reader does not assume the Investor is still an adviser, and the Investor shall give the Company an address for notices that does not depend on his continuing to advise it.

Operative instrument term 2

issue_date: 2026-02-27.

The advisor SAFE applies its own discount, conversion, and amendment definitions to this term.

10. This Instrument Is Not Compensation and the Investor Is Not an Employee

The Investor is an independent contractor. He is not an employee, an officer or a director of the Company, has no authority to bind it, and is not eligible for its employee benefit plans. This instrument was not issued under the Company's equity incentive plan and was not issued in reliance on the exemption available for securities offered under a compensatory benefit plan. (17 C.F.R. § 230.701)

The Company has not treated the issue of this instrument as a payment for services in its own accounts, has not reported it as compensation, and has not withheld any amount in respect of it. The Investor is responsible for his own tax position in respect of both his advisory fees and this instrument, and the Company has given him no tax advice.

If a tax authority were to treat the issue of this instrument as compensatory, the consequences fall on the Investor and the Company gives no indemnity. The parties recorded the cash payment, its source and its independence from the advisory agreement so that the character of the transaction can be established from the documents.

11. Confidentiality and the Investor's Other Engagements

The Investor shall keep confidential the terms of this instrument and any information he receives under it, and shall not disclose either except to his spouse, his professional advisers and any person to whom disclosure is required by law. He shall not disclose the terms to another holder of an instrument of this kind or to a prospective investor in the Company.

The Investor advises other companies. He has disclosed to the Company the engagements listed in the disclosure register maintained under the advisory agreement, and shall notify the Company before accepting an engagement with a company that competes with it. This instrument does not restrict his engagements; the restriction, if any, is in the advisory agreement.

The Investor shall not use information he receives as an adviser in deciding whether to make an election or to give a consent under this instrument, and shall not use information he receives as a holder in his advisory work. He acknowledged that the two capacities are separate and that he is responsible for keeping them so.

Annex 2 - Which document governs each aspect of the relationship

Subject	Governed by	Not governed by	Record kept by	Available to the Investor
Advisory fees and expenses	The advisory agreement	This instrument	Chief Financial Officer	Statements as agreed
Scope and cadence of advisory work	The advisory agreement	This instrument	Chief Technology Officer	The agreement itself
Disclosure of other engagements	The advisory agreement	This instrument	Company secretary	The disclosure register
Confidentiality of advisory information	The advisory agreement	This instrument	Company counsel	The agreement itself
Confidentiality of this instrument's terms	This instrument	The advisory agreement	Company secretary	This instrument
Payment of the Purchase Amount	This instrument	The advisory agreement	Chief Financial Officer	Acknowledgement of receipt
Conversion on a defined event	This instrument	The advisory agreement	Chief Financial Officer	Officer's certificate
Effect of a termination for cause	The advisory agreement	This instrument	Company counsel	The agreement itself
Tax treatment of fees	The advisory agreement	This instrument	Chief Financial Officer	As law requires

Subject	Governed by	Not governed by	Record kept by	Available to the Investor
	and law
Tax treatment of this instrument	Law; no Company indemnity	The advisory agreement	Not applicable	Not applicable
Transfer on death	This instrument	The advisory agreement	Company secretary	This instrument
Notices after termination	This instrument	The advisory agreement	Company secretary	This instrument

12. Representations of an Individual Investor

The Investor represents that he is an accredited investor by reference to the criteria applicable to a natural person (17 C.F.R. § 230.501), that he subscribed for his own account and not as nominee for another, that he has the knowledge and experience to evaluate the risks of the investment, and that he can bear the loss of the whole Purchase Amount.

He represents that he was not solicited by any advertisement or general communication, that he had access to the Company's officers and asked the questions he wished to ask, and that he did not rely on any projection or forecast. The Company issued the instrument in reliance on those representations and on the exemption available for a limited offering to accredited investors. (17 C.F.R. § 230.506(b))

The Investor acknowledges that this instrument and any security issued on its conversion are restricted securities, that no market exists for them, and that he may be required to hold them indefinitely. (17 C.F.R. § 230.144)

13. Transfer Prohibited Except by Operation of Law

The Investor may not transfer this instrument, or any interest in it, whether by sale, gift, pledge or declaration of trust. The prohibition is absolute and the Company will not consent to a transfer, this being an instrument issued to a named individual on terms the Company offers to individuals and not to institutions.

The instrument passes on the Investor's death to his personal representative and, on the completion of the administration of his estate, to the person entitled under his will or on his intestacy, in each case on that person giving the Company the representations in Section 12 adapted to his or her circumstances. A transfer pursuant to a court order in matrimonial proceedings is permitted on the same condition.

A purported transfer in breach of this Section is void and the Company shall not record it. The Company may require evidence of a transferee's entitlement, including letters of administration or a certified copy of a will, before recording a transfer permitted by this Section.

14. Notices, Amendment, Governing Law and Counterparts

A notice to the Investor is given to the address he has notified for this purpose, which shall be a personal address and not an address at the Company or at any company he advises. A notice to the Company is given to its address in the notice particulars. Notices are effective on delivery, or on written confirmation of receipt if given by electronic mail.

This instrument may be amended only in writing signed by the Company and the Investor. An amendment of the advisory agreement is not an amendment of this instrument, and a document that amends both shall say so expressly and shall be signed for both purposes.

Delaware law applies, and the choice-of-law rules of any other state are excluded. Signature in counterparts is permitted and an electronically transmitted signature suffices. If a provision cannot be enforced, the rest of the instrument survives it. The signature page and the particulars attached to this instrument are part of it, and it is from those documents rather than from this text that the figures used in the calculations are taken.

Operative instrument term 3

purchase_amount: 400000.

The advisor SAFE applies its own discount, conversion, and amendment definitions to this term.

15. Records Kept for an Instrument Held by an Individual

The Company keeps for this instrument the records listed in Annex 3. It keeps them separately from the personnel and contractor files that relate to the Investor's advisory work, so that a person examining the Company's securities records does not see his advisory file and a person examining his advisory file does not see his investment.

The Company shall not include this instrument in a schedule of compensatory awards, in a report of equity granted to service providers, or in any document that presents it as remuneration. Where a schedule of the Company's instruments of this kind is prepared, this instrument appears in it alongside the instruments held by institutions and is not distinguished as an adviser's holding.

The Company shall retain the record of the cash payment and its source for as long as it keeps its securities records. That record is the primary evidence that the instrument was bought rather than granted, and the Company shall produce it to its auditors on request without requiring the Investor's consent.

Annex 3 - Records kept for this instrument and where each is held

Record	Held by	What it establishes	Held with the advisory file	Retention
The executed instrument and its particulars	Company secretary	The terms agreed and the values on the signature page	No	Life of the Company
Record of the cash payment and its source	Chief Financial Officer	That the instrument was bought for the Investor's own money	No	Life of the Company
Acknowledgement of receipt of the Purchase Amount	Chief Financial Officer	The amount received and the date of receipt	No	Seven years
The Investor's written confirmations before subscribing	Company counsel	That he took his own advice and understood the risk	No	Life of the instrument
Counsel note on the non-compensatory character	Company counsel	Why no compensatory exemption was relied on	No	Life of the instrument
Register entry for instruments of this kind	Company secretary	That this instrument is outstanding and on the post-money form	No	Life of the Company
Note of the termination of the advisory relationship	Company secretary	That the Investor is no longer an adviser, if applicable	Cross-referenced only	Life of the instrument
The Investor's notified personal address	Company secretary	Where notices are to be sent after any termination	No	Life of the instrument
Conversion calculation and officer's certificate	Chief Financial Officer	The basis applied and which of the two bases was better	No	Life of the Company
Record of which basis was applied at conversion	Chief Financial Officer	That the Cap basis or the discount basis was used	No	Life of the Company
Statement of holding after conversion	Equity administrator	The shares recorded in the Investor's own name	No	Life of the Company
Legend and adherence notation	Equity administrator	The restrictions applying to the shares issued	No	Life of the Company
Evidence produced on a transfer by operation of law	Company counsel	The transferee's entitlement under a will or an order	No	Life of the Company
Refused transfer requests	Company secretary	That a purported transfer was not recorded	No	Seven years
Disclosure register of the Investor's engagements	Company secretary	The engagements he disclosed under the advisory agreement	Yes	Life of the agreement
Index cross-referring the two files	Company secretary	Where each of the above is held	Yes	Life of the Company

16. What the Company Will and Will Not Confirm to a Third Party

The Investor may ask the Company to confirm to a lender, to a tax authority or to his own advisers that he holds this instrument and that it remains outstanding. The Company shall give that confirmation once in each of its fiscal years without charge, and shall state in it the date of the instrument and the fact that it is an agreement for the future issue of equity rather than a share or a debt.

The Company shall not confirm a value for this instrument, shall not confirm the number of shares it would produce on a hypothetical financing, and shall not confirm the Company's valuation to any person at the Investor's request. It shall not provide a confirmation addressed to a person the Investor has not identified, and shall not provide one that omits the statement that the instrument may produce nothing.

The Company shall record each confirmation it gives and each request it refuses, with the reason for the refusal, so that its practice can be seen to be consistent across the holders of its instruments of this kind. It applies the same practice to an individual holder as to an institution.

Annex 4 - Confirmations the Company gives and refuses on request

Request	Given or refused	Reason recorded	Addressed to	Recorded by
That the instrument is outstanding	Given	A statement of the Company's own records	The person the Investor identifies	Company secretary
The date the instrument was signed	Given	Appears on the face of the instrument	The person the Investor identifies	Company secretary
That the instrument is not a share or a debt	Given	A statement of the instrument's legal character	The person the Investor identifies	Company counsel
That no amendment has been made	Given	A statement of the Company's own records	The person the Investor identifies	Company secretary
The Purchase Amount paid	Given	Appears on the face of the instrument	The Investor's own advisers only	Chief Financial Officer
A value for the instrument	Refused	The Company does not value instruments of this kind	Not applicable	Chief Financial Officer
Shares produced on a hypothetical financing	Refused	A hypothetical calculation would mislead	Not applicable	Chief Financial Officer
The Company's own valuation	Refused	Not a matter for a holder's confirmation	Not applicable	Chief Financial Officer
A comparison with another holder's terms	Refused	Another holder's terms are confidential	Not applicable	Company counsel
A confirmation to an unidentified recipient	Refused	The recipient must be identified in advance	Not applicable	Company secretary
A confirmation omitting the risk statement	Refused	The risk statement is part of every confirmation	Not applicable	Company counsel
A second confirmation in the same year	Given at the Investor's expense	The first is free; a second is chargeable	The person the Investor identifies	Chief Financial Officer

17. Acknowledgements the Investor Gave Before Signing

The Investor acknowledged in writing, before he paid the Purchase Amount, that he had been offered the opportunity to take independent legal and tax advice and had decided for himself whether to take it, and that the Company's counsel acted for the Company alone and did not advise him.

He acknowledged that he was investing an amount he could afford to lose, that he was not relying on any statement by the Company's officers about the Company's prospects, and that his advisory relationship with the Company gave him no better information about the value of this instrument than an outside investor would have had.

He acknowledged finally that he understood the difference between buying an instrument for cash and receiving an award under an equity incentive plan, that he was doing the former, and that he would not later contend that the instrument was granted to him as remuneration for his services.